Master's thesis is devoted to the disclosure, systematization and analysis of mechanisms of human rights protection and the justification of their application in the Internet. The theoretical and methodological foundations of human rights, essence and basic approaches of their understanding are researched. The international and regional mechanisms of human rights protection are defined. The normative and legal regulation of human rights in the Internet is investigated.

The current tendencies of the formation of human rights policy are determined by analyzing the activities of international organizations – the United Nations and the Council of Europe – in the realization of human rights online and offline; diagnostics of the current state of mechanisms of human rights protection on the Internet; definition of domestic specificity of management in the field of human rights protection.

In order to improve the management of human rights protection on the Internet, management strategies for combating human rights violations in the Internet have been developed and ways of improving the human rights protection mechanisms in the Internet have been developed.
